Welcome Letter from Ron Burke, CEO

The Alliance for Water Efficiency welcomes you to the 4th Annual Water Efficiency and Conservation Symposium. Practitioners and professionals from across the water sector are here to share strategies, confront challenges, and build relationships that help preserve our most essential resource.

For nearly two decades, the Alliance for Water Efficiency has been a trusted leader and convener in the water efficiency community, providing members and partners with the research, expertise, tools, and connections needed to advance sustainable water management. Our work is more important than ever given that population growth, climate change, drought, and environmental contaminants are creating additional pressure on water supplies, infrastructure, and communities.

An additional challenge is the anti-efficiency policies of the current presidential administration. AWE's credible, unified voice of reason has been instrumental in blocking proposals to eliminate the highly successful WaterSense program and weaken federal water efficiency standards for plumbing fixtures and appliances.

Our success is rooted in the people who make up AWE. Together, our staff, members, and partners form a vibrant community of passionate, innovative, and collaborative professionals who generously share knowledge and work collectively to address complex water challenges. The opportunity to work with this remarkably kind and innovative community is the best part of my job!

This Symposium showcases the comradery and impact of our community and is an opportunity to be even more successful by learning from one another to build a more water-efficient future. We encourage you to carry these conversations forward—through AWE's Online Member Forum, committee meetings, webinars, roundtables, and research collaborations.

Thank you for your dedication and for being part of this passionate community committed to advancing the field of water efficiency and rising to the challenges that each day brings.
